- Career Concerns

Understanding This Assessment

This assessment looks at nine areas of a student's day-to-day experience over the past two weeks. Together they build a rounded picture of wellbeing, not a label, but a starting point for a supportive conversation.

Anxiety	The body's natural early-warning response to stress — worry, tension, restlessness and racing thoughts.
Depression	Persistent low mood, reduced enjoyment, fatigue or difficulty concentrating that can affect daily functioning.
Suicidal Ideation	Thoughts, ideas or ruminations about ending one's life. Any endorsement here is reviewed with the highest priority.
Substance Abuse	A pattern of using alcohol, tobacco or other substances that causes distress or interferes with daily life.
Self-Esteem Problems	How a person feels about their own worth, abilities and limitations.
Interpersonal Problems	Disagreement or difficulty in relationships — emotional, social or professional.
Family Problems	Dynamics, behaviors or patterns at home that create tension for the student.
Academic Stress	Confusion, time-pressure or disengagement connected to coursework and performance.
Career Concerns	Uncertainty, indecision or pressure related to future career choices.

Safety Status

✓ No critical safety items were endorsed

The three designated critical safety items — covering past attempts, a clear plan, or thoughts of obtaining means to end one's life — were all rated "Never" by the student.

Where to Focus Support

Two domains fall in the Higher Relative range this cycle and are the natural starting points for a supportive check-in.

Academic Stress — 14/24 (Higher Relative)

This suggests noticeable pressure around workload, deadlines, and matching effort to results, common and very manageable first-year experiences

A conversation exploring study planning, time-management strategies, and realistic expectation-setting could offer quick, tangible relief.

Family Problems — 12/24 (Higher Relative)

There is some indication of tension, high expectations, or communication gaps at home that Harshita is carrying alongside academic life.

Gently exploring the support system and current home context is a good next step.

Moderate Relative Domain

Moderate Relative domains

Anxiety (11/24), Depression (14/24), Self-Esteem Problems (8/24) and Career Concerns (13/24) all fall in the Moderate Relative range.

Areas of relative strength

Interpersonal Problems (6/24) and Substance Abuse (0/24) shows no endorsement at all.

These are encouraging signs — the student appears to be maintaining social connection and does not report substance use as a coping strategy.

Recommended Support Plan

Priority	Recommended Direction
High	Academic-focused check-in: study planning, time management and easing the pressure between effort and results.
High	Family-focused conversation: understand current home expectations, communication patterns and available support.
Moderate	Explore anxiety, mood and career-related uncertainty in relation to first-year adjustment and coping strategies already in use.
Ongoing	Build on existing strengths — social connection and the absence of substance-use coping — and identify further protective factors and goals.

Gentle Everyday Suggestions

🌙 Protect sleep Aim for 6–8 hours a night — sleep is one of the fastest levers for mood and focus.	🚶 Move daily Even a 30-minute walk, good food and enough water can noticeably steady energy and stress.
👥 Lean on people Regular time with family or friends who feel supportive can ease the load of a demanding term.	🗂️ Plan the workload Breaking deadlines into smaller steps can shrink that overwhelmed feeling around exams.
🎯 Talk it through A short conversation with a counsellor can help turn career uncertainty into a clearer next step.	💬 Reach out early Support is most useful before pressure builds — checking in now is a strength, not a setback.
